The Seagate in Delray Beach, Fla., has completed a $55 million transformation that unites its boutique resort and private member clubs under one elevated experience. Led by Turnberry, the multi-year project revitalized the property's Golf, Beach, and Yacht Clubs and marks its debut as Delray Beach's first property in Marriott Bonvoy's Autograph Collection. The Seagate remains privately owned and operated by Turnberry.

At the Seagate Golf Club, architect J. Drew Rogers modernized the 18-hole championship course with re-sculpted greens, refined bunkering, and enhanced landscaping. The update also extended to the club's racquet complex, which now features refreshed tennis and pickleball courts for both members and hotel guests.

The Seagate Beach Club offers new ocean-view dining, a cocktail bar, and a terrace lounge that complement its breezy, two-story layout. The refreshed pool deck and private beach access make it a key amenity for both members and hotel guests.

The Seagate Yacht Club—a 44-slip marina complete with clubhouse, sun deck, and lounge areas—continues to serve as a distinctive part of the Seagate experience, celebrating Delray Beach’s maritime heritage while offering exclusive access for members and transient boaters.

Additional updates include a redesigned Seagate Spa, now a tranquil 8,000-square-foot wellness destination, and an expanded Pool Deck featuring lush landscaping, Moorish-inspired cabanas, and relaxed social spaces.

With more than 650 members and a growing waitlist, The Seagate’s private membership program continues to thrive alongside the resort operation. Both members and hotel guests enjoy access to the property’s network of clubs, dining venues, and wellness amenities, reflecting Turnberry’s goal of creating one seamless, service-driven community.

According to Mary Rogers, Executive Vice President of Hospitality Operations at Turnberry, the transformation was designed to create a more personal experience rooted in Delray Beach's character, with intentional design and service guiding every part of the member and guest journey.
